AMONG THE MISSING

PROF. HOMER R. SALISBURY, PROMINENT ADVENTIST, LOST WITH THE PERSIA

On reading accounts of the sinking of the liner Persia in Wednesday afternoon's dailies, many connected with the Glendale Sanitarium were greatly shocked to find the name of Prof. Homer R. Salisbury mentioned as one of the missing in the telegraph report.

Only a few weeks ago Professor Salisbury had been a guest at the hotel, as he was a close acquaintance and personal friend of a number of Adventist workers connected with that institution. He also has a brother, Mr. W. D. Salisbury, living in Glendale at the present time.

Professor Salisbury arrived in Glendale about November 1, from India, to attend the world conference of Seventh Day Adventists held at Loma Linda. Dr. D. D. Comstock, medical superintendent of the Glendale Sanitarium, says: "I remember very distinctly his coming up and reading the paper over my shoulder while attending the conference. In this paper was an account of the sinking of the Ancona which led him to say he must change his plans in regard to his trip to India. A day or two later he informed me he had decided to return by the way of his original course, the Mediterranean.

"Professor Salisbury was one of my teachers in college, and his friends here cannot express the sorrow that this news brings. It is hoped that he can yet be accounted for."

The professor is one of the best known men among the Seventh-Day Adventist denomination. He was formerly educational secretary of the General Conference and only a little over two years ago, he was sent to India to take the superintendency of that mission field.

Prof. Salisbury was superintendent of the India Union Mission field of the Seventh-day Adventists, and was returning to his post from the world council of the denomination, recently held at Loma Linda, Cal. He was fearful of the route through the Mediterranean Sea, and expressed his fears to intimate friends at the time of the council meeting near Los Angeles. Day after day during the session he watched the reports in the newspapers, and a few days before he left for the East said that if any more ships were sunk by submarines in the Mediterranean, he would return to India by way of Japan. However, he decided at the last moment to take the Atlantic route because it would save him considerable time, and he wished to reach his field as quickly as possible.

Prof. Salisbury took charge of the India field in 1913, succeeding Prof. H. S. Shaw. In accepting the new position in the Orient Mr. Salisbury surrendered his position of educational secretary of the Seventh-day Adventists for the world field. The Adventist leader had been engaged in educational lines for many years before going to India. Entering this work in America, he went to England in 1902, where he established what is now Watford Missionary Training College, of the Adventists. It was then carried on in London, and it was Prof. Salisbury who was instrumental in the purchase of the Watford property.

His interest in missionary work among Mohammedans led him to accept the superintendency of the Levant Union Mission, including at that time Egypt, Turkey, Syria, Palestine and Greece. A few months later, however, he was asked to return to America to take charge of the newly organized Washington Foreign Mission Seminary, now known as Washington Missionary College, at the nation's capital. It was this work which he was doing when asked to become educational secretary for the General or World Conference, previous to taking charge of the Indian field.

MAKES SUCCESS IN FLORIDA

Many Glendale residents who had the pleasure of knowing the Wells family of Canon Crest, who left Glendale some three or four years ago and are now located in Florida, will be interested in hearing that James Jr. is making a success as an agriculturist, a business which he seems to have adopted for his choice in the world's activities. At a recent agricultural fair held at Jacksonville he took a large number of first and second prizes and ribbons for the display of the products of his farm.

Among first prizes were those given for displays of corn, peanuts, lespedeza (Japanese hay) and hogs. His general farm exhibit took second premium. Mr. Wells is specializing in pecans, having a large young grove of those trees.

TRIP TO THE ORIENT

GLENDALE WOMAN LEAVES TODAY ON EXTENDED TOUR OF EASTERN COUNTRIES

Mrs. Susan Nethery, 1210 Maple avenue, leaves today for San Francisco, whence she will sail for a six months' trip in the Orient. Leaving San Francisco Saturday, Jan. 8, at 1 p. m., in the Japan Mail Steamship company's palatial vessel, the Tonyo Maru, Mrs. Nethery will proceed direct to Yokohama. There time will be afforded for a run up to the capital, Tokio. After a time spent in seeing different places of interest, the tourist will go to Hongkong, the British island possession on the coast of China, and thence to points of interest in China proper.

From China the trip will turn back to Japan and the interesting port of Nagasaki will be visited as well as other prominent places on the western coast of the main island. From Nagasaki the route will be to Manila and the Philippines, where a pleasant trip will be made over the fine roads constructed recently by the American government of the islands. From the Philippines the route will cross the Pacific again to Honolulu and the Hawaiian islands, where some days will be spent on the warm beaches. Thence the route will be homeward to San Francisco.

C. E. ELECTS OFFICERS

At the recent meeting of the Christian Endeavor society of the First Congregational church an interesting session was held. The chief business of the meeting was the election of officers for the next six months. The following were elected: Ethel Preston, president; W. E. Welv, vice president; Katharine Coates, secretary; Mabel Galey, treasurer; chairman of prayer meeting committee, Hazel Taylor; chairman of lookout committee, Ernest Schuyler; chairman of social committee, Elizabeth Smith; chairman of mission and flower committee, Lois Schuyler; pianist, Carol Willisford. The Rev. E. H. Willisford, pastor of the church, who is ex officio member of the executive committee of the C. E., will meet with the committee Friday, Jan. 7, at the Willisford residence, 231 Orange street, for the purpose of arranging plans for the ensuing six months.

ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM

Among the many interesting features of the anniversary entertainment of the W. C. T. U. of Glendale Friday, Jan. 7, will be a sketch of the history of the organization in the early days. This will be graphically given by Miss Sherer, who was one of the first members of the organization in this city, her membership dating from 1886. The growth of the society in 1915 will be illustrated by the admission of fourteen new members.

Special music and readings will be given by Mrs. Coral Harrison Sloan, whose Bible readings have been a special and attractive feature of the ordinary meetings of the local union. Among the interesting speakers, readers and singers who will take part in the celebration are Mrs. Mary Knox, Mrs. Gertrude Beveridge,, Miss Grist, Miss Helen McGinnis of San Bernardino and others.

Mrs. Hattie Gaylord will give a resume of the work and progress of the society under her presidency. Mrs. Hester Griffith, state vice president, will give the principal address. Mrs. Griffith, who has been state vice president for four years, has spent much of her time at the state legislature and is conversant with work that has been done there to forward the interests of temperance.

This entertainment will take place in the Presbyterian church from 10:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. An informal reception, reminiscences and a short business session will occupy the forenoon.

GLENDALE GARDEN SOCIETY

The Glendale Garden society will hold its regular meeting Thursday evening, January 6, at 8 o'clock, in the Chamber of Commerce hall. The meeting will be preceded by a social half hour at 7:30. DEBATE AT HIGH SCHOOL

LOCAL TEAMS TO MEET HUNTINGTON PARK AND HUNTINGTON BEACH SPEAKERS

Glendale Union High School will hold a simultaneous debate with Huntington Beach and Huntington Park high schools on the subject of National Defense and the United States. This will be the second debate in the Southwestern Debating league of which Glendale is a member.

The subject of National Defense and the United States is still to be limited by the University of California Extension bureau and the local school will receive the exact wording of their subject one week before the debate.

Teams which were selected Wednesday night are: Affirmative, Joseph Maier and Frank Bridgeford; negative, Howard Stickney and Samuel Durand. One of these teams will speak here against Huntington Park while the other team will journey to Huntington Beach to meet the representatives of that school.

At the present time Glendale leads the division of small high schools in the debating league, having five out of six judges' decisions. If the coming debate results in like results, Glendale will be in the field against the leader of the large city school division for the championship of the southern part of the state.

"Glendale has good chances for a championship this year," said Prof. W. D. Root, debating coach, to an Evening News reporter. "Last year we defeated Huntington Park High school team and although we have never met Huntington Beach in high school debating, our contestants in the Southern California oratorical meet have always stood higher in the estimation of the judges than those of the latter school.

All of the Glendale debaters are experienced and are practicing every evening in an effort to solve the question whether the United States should provide a greater navy and coast defenses or should they follow the plan of unpreparedness.

PARLIAMENTARY LAW

The regular meeting of the parliamentary law class of the Tuesday Afternoon club will be held at the Masonic temple at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday, January 11.

In the drill Mrs. Helen I. Campbell will preside. This will be followed by a "quiz" on privileged and incidental motions.

Mrs. I. W. Gleason, district chairman of parliamentary usage, reports fifteen or more clubs in the district actively studying for the contest to be held at the district convention at Hollywood in March. Last year the Tuesday Afternoon club was represented in this contest by Mrs. P. S. McNutt and won the prize, a beautiful silken banner, which prize the club holds for one year.

On the second Tuesday in February next a contest will be held in the Tuesday Afternoon club to determine who shall represent the club this year and bring home the banner.

FIRST BIRTHDAY

The Doran Street school Parent-Teacher association celebrated its first anniversary on Wednesday afternoon, January 5th. The pupils from the three grades of the school contributed pleasing numbers for the afternoon's program.

There were really two features, the one being a huge birthday cake with one lighted candle made and presented by the newly elected president, Mrs. H. A. Barton, then, for the first time the new Victrola recently purchased by the school was heard.

Serving refreshments during the social hour were Mrs. F. K. Myton and Mrs. Porter Case. It was then the birthday cake was cut.

Messages of congratulation sent by Mrs. Charles H. Toll, former president of the Glendale Federation P. T. A. and Mrs. Chas. Hutchinson, filling the chair this year, were read.

ANOTHER DINNER

New Year's day was made the occasion of a most pleasant dinner at the hour of five given by Dr. and Mrs. Colin Cable for relatives and friends at their home, 755 Columbus avenue. Royal poinsettias formed a brilliant center for the table, the living room being in carnations of red and ferns. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Fitzgerald and Mrs. Dunlap of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Ashton, Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy W. Bosserman and two little sons, the Masters Charles and Lyman Bosserman, Mrs. J. H. Emerson and Miss Frances Klippel.

RECORD OF CRIME

JUDGE WHOMES TRIED 202 CASES IN 1915 WITH VARYING RESULTS

"It is really remarkable," said Judge Whomes, Glendale's city recorder to a representative of The Glendale Evening News, "how comparatively free the city of Glendale was in 1915 of serious crime. The record speaks for itself. There were 202 cases tried in this court during the year. They were all misdemeanors or violations of ordinances.

"During the year 1915 fines were imposed in the Recorder's court to the total amount of $1006.50. This money was all collected and paid over to the city treasury.

"There was no serious crime. Glendale has been remarkably free from serious crime and the city was quite shocked when the story of the recent murder in Tropico was reported. It would be difficult to get a city of better morals than the one in which we live. Of all these 202 cases, which is an average of only two cases a week, the greater part were merely punished by small fines with the alternative of a few days in prison. In most cases the fines were paid.

"We have one case of serious crime when some Mexicans took to quarreling over liquor they had purchased. It will be remembered that one of these Mexicans rushed to his cabin and got his gun, a 30-30 rifle, and shot another of the company, wounding his desperately in the knee. The case was taken out of our hands and came under the jurisdiction of the higher courts.

"We had one or two cases of assaults of a minor character while violations of city ordinances called for considerable attention. I am glad to be able to note the good sense with which the police superintendence of the city is carried out. A great many cases might easily be dragged into court which would not be worthy of a judge's attention. Many of these are dealt with at first hand by the police who warn and advise citizens in their troubles and keep them in the straight way without the intervention of a judge.

"In quite a number of cases Chief of Police Herald admonishes boys caught violating city ordinances and sends them home without entering their names on the court record. When the case is serious enough he brings the boys before me and I read and explain the violated ordinance to them and send them home with a caution. This does more good than more drastic measures.

"The average citizen is only too apt to run to the police with every petty trouble. You will find that the police record is a most remarkable series of stories of domestic and neighborhood disputes; complaints concerning dogs and other animals and reports of garbage burning and suspicious characters loafing about premises.

"Within a few pages we find complaints of a cow tied in the public street; three men supposed to be pickpockets wandering around; or a horse tied to a lamp-post; of attempted burglary; of runaway girls and boys; of demented men leaving their homes. Family jars and quarrels of neighbors are to be found beside reports of stolen wheels and stolen chickens. Chicken thieves, along about Thanksgiving and Christmas time, are frequently reported.

"Violations of liquor ordinances were quite common. There were also a number of drunken individuals arrested and fined. The first offense is usually commuted for $5 or five days. Should the misguided individual come back on a similar charge he gets $10 or ten days; while for a third offense he must pay $25 or go to jail for 25 days. That gives him a chance to sober up and bethink himself of his folly. Both the police and the police magistrate strive to administer justice with an even hand and to let mercy season justice when possible. That this course is best for the city can be seen in the fact that serious crime is absent and that with an increasing population crime of all kinds is decreasing."

MISS McFADDEN WEDS

A very quiet wedding united in marriage on New Year's day Miss Ada McFadden, daughter of the M. T. McFaddens at 1710 West Broadway, this city, and Mr. Wm. R. McKee of Fresno, Cal. The ceremony took place in Los Angeles, Judge Conroy officiating. The bride was tastefully robed in a traveling suit of hunter's green and fur with turban and accessories to match.

After a short sojourn in Southern California the young people will go north to make their future home.

The departure of this popular girl will be a source of regret to her many friends.

CONCERNING THE BOND ELECTION

At the coming election the voters of Glendale are to be asked to vote on the question of incurring a bonded debt of $70,000, for the purpose of building and constructing dikes, dams, banks and other protection for the property of the city from the overflow by the Verdugo Canyon Wash and Sycamore Canyon Wash, and for the acquisition of the necessary easements and rights of way over which to construct and carry out those improvements. This is one of the most important questions that has ever come up before the citizens for decision, and it would be well that they should approach its settlement with the spirit of information.

It is true that Glendale does not have every year a practical demonstration of the necessity for the permanent improvement of the Wash. Many persons seem to imagine that the winters in which there are no floods are the natural conditions that surround Glendale during that season. If that were the case there would be no question of improving the Wash and the city would need no protection from the possible ravages of the flood.

It would be well, however, that all voters should inform themselves on this matter. It would be well if they would take a walk along the Wash from Sycamore canyon to its exit from the city and acquaint themselves with conditions as they are. It would also be well if they would inquire as to the action of flood water on the banks of the Wash and learn what happened in the floods of the past.

If floods are to come, and the experience of the past tells us that there is no immunity from them, just as there is no set time nor season for them, then it would be wise for an intelligent citizenry to consider if the annual interest on $70,000 is not a small sum to pay for insurance against damage to property that would vastly exceed that sum.

Annually sums of money are expended in doing repair and so-called protection work on the Wash, and yet experts tell us that those sums are really thrown away, as the work done is merely patchwork which would be torn out and whirled away by the force of the all-prevailing waters that at times rush down from the canyons.

Such is the question and its importance. It is put squarely up to the voters at this election and they are the judges of the necessity for this protection and the need of providing it. After this no voter can plead ignorance of the conditions that confront the city or assert that opportunity was not given for providing protection for the property of the city from damage and destruction by storm and surface water.

It may also be well to remind the voters that the polls for the election will be opened Tuesday, Jan. 11, at 6 a. m., and will be kept open until 7 p. m. Voters who are in the polling booths or in the lines at the doors before 7 p. m. will be given time to record their ballots; but those arriving at the polling places after 7 p. m. will not be allowed to vote. There are four polling places: A tent at southeast corner of Third street and Glendale avenue for Precinct No. 1; a brick building at the southeast corner of second and Brand for No. 2; a tent at northeast corner of Lomita avenue and Brand boulevard, for No. 3, and a tent at the northeast corner of Glendale avenue and Colorado boulevard for No. 4.

SAN DIEGO'S UNIQUE EXPOSITION

Everyone in California rejoices that San Diego is to keep her exposition open another year. San Diego deserves success for the wonderful Fair she managed to create in one of the loveliest parts of the Pacific coast. The exposition at San Diego was in the field before the San Franciscans dreamed of having such an affair. San Francisco coolly shouldered San Diego out of the road and occupied the field.

This would have daunted less courageous people than those of San Diego; but the man who conceived the Fair, Col. D. C. Collier, is a fighter of renown. Nothing daunted, he, with the other officials, pushed the San Diego Fair and finally brought forth battle to victory. San Diego has a Fair that would be a credit to any city in the United States.

Out of the barren, desert hillsides in the center of the city, in Balboa park, the Fair authorities have created a veritable Garden of Allah. Orange groves, with every species of orange tree, scent the air; gorgeous masses of shrubs of every kind show brilliant patches of color here and there, and from the midst of them peer out picturesque kiosks, bungalows and States' buildings. They are in Mission style, with broad patios, cool cloistered halls and masses of flowers and shrubs everywhere. They are intensely of the old time and redolent of the days when the "soft, sweet echo of the serenade" echoed through the latticed casements of the old cities of Southern California.

The Sierras look down on the Exposition and the Exposition looks down on the sea. Nothing could be more wonderfully beautiful than its site. Before it serenely streams the sunlight on the blue Pacific and lights up the picturesque corridors of the Mission buildings of the Fair. Cloudless stretches aloft and blue the dreaming California sky. All this uniqueness of beauty is to charm the eyes and souls of Americans for another year and it is not too much to prophesy for the Exposition an abundant success.

FINANCIAL OUTLOOK IN JAPAN

Nothing that concerns the welfare of any nation in the Pacific can fail to be of vast and profound interest to the United States. The nations that border on the Pacific have long eyed each other with jealous gaze and talked below their breaths of a time when the struggle for the leadership of the great ocean would have to be fought with other than diplomatic weapons. Japan is one of the great nations of the Pacific and has aspirations to leadership that cannot fail to interest the United States.

While it is true that Japan has aspirations to lead in the Pacific, it is also true that there is room for every nation in that vast area and that there is less fear now than ever of there being a clash between them. The lessons of the great war in Europe tend to make nations chary of entering on a fight that would cripple them badly and defeat the very object for which they might be striving.

Both Japan and the United States have profited largely by the war in Europe. Both have been manufacturing munitions of war for the Allies and have found that it is more profitable to be the merchants than the soldiers. It is not likely that the lesson will be lost.

At the close of the war with Russia the Japanese were inclined to think they had been tricked by the treaty that was made at Portsmouth. There were many rights, as they conceived them, that belonged to the victors that were given up and many fruits of victory that were not insisted on. That they were not insisted on was the result of the exhaustion of Japan's finances by the war. The statesmen of Japan knew that their country could not carry on the war much longer, even though victorious, simply because their money was exhausted. The nations, too, were not so eager to lend money for the purpose of carrying on the war.

Japan was financially exhausted and needed a rest. Since that time the Japanese have been brought to realize how serious was the condition to which the war had reduced their nation. They found it necessary to increase taxation and their people murmured under the burdens. That was the price of leadership in the Far East. It began to be realized by the whole nation that war is terribly expensive. Japan, one may be sure, is not seeking a recrudescence of such conditions. For Japan has emerged from that period of darkness by reason of Europe's terrible contest for the supremacy of the West and of the seas.

Japan now finds no necessity for seeking foreign loans to carry on her government. She is prosperous and continues to prosper. For more than a year she has been manufacturing munitions on a very large scale and to the utmost of her national capacity. Russia would ere now have been crushed and her Baltic provinces reft from her had not Japan come to the aid of her former enemy and supplied her with the ammunition which she so badly needed. This trade is practically unlimited for the time being. Russia can absorb all the munitions of war Japan can manufacture and this trade has made Japan prosperous beyond anything of which she could have dreamed. It is not likely that Japan will risk her much appreciated prosperity in a war which might bankrupt her entirely.

History is being made all round us in these days. Apart from the war in Europe which absorbs so much of the thought and energies of the world, it is interesting and of vast import to know that twenty-one American republics are making efforts at this moment to complete and solidify a league between themselves whereby the intrests of the American continents may be conserved and the possibility of aggressive war on these two continents by other nations be reduced to a minimum. This is a step in the right direction. Many able and unselfish Americans have been working on this plan for years. Never till now, however, has it been possible to get the American nations to regard the matter in the light of feasibility. It is now likely, however, that such a union will be consummated. When it has been formed it should be possible to get some of the European powers to enter the "entente" with the determination to compel the world to live at peace. Singular as it may sound it will be necessary to be able to compel peace in order to obtain it. This is only one of the many wonderful things that the "Great War" has rendered possible.

There is no justification for the American people losing their heads over national politics in 1916.

Neither house of congress has any one member who overshadows his fellow-members in statesmanly ability.

Most of Villa's army is now under the Carranza banner. Constancy is not the long suit of those Mexican fighters.

MULE STIRS POETIC FIRE

Usually the mule would not be considered a very poetical subject, but to the poetic soul all things are sufficient spur for the imagination. The Missouri mule must have good qualities about him to have evoked the following effusion which is the production of Robert Wilson, teamster, Casa Verdugo:

The Mule

You can have your auto trucks
And your fancy Hupmobiles;
But give to me a team of mules
That can climb the rugged hills.

You can have your running stock—
Horses fast and slow:
But give to me a team of mules,
No matter where I go.

You can have your trolley cars
And jitney buses, too;
But there's nothing like a pulling mule
That can kick a streak or two.

You can have your aeroplanes
The clouds to ramble through;
But I'll stay on earth and take a chance
Behind a mule or two.

You can take a dip in your submarine
And drill the ocean through;
But I'd sooner stay on land I say
And skin a mule or two.

You can trot them down the dump
And up the hillside, too;
Your streets wou'd look like country roads
Without a mule or two.

MAKING A DESK ATTRACTIVE

A very pretty cretonne desk set may be made by the girl who is nimble with her fingers, and will be an ideal present for some friend who takes pride in her well appointed boudoir, say the Daily Oklahoman. The desk set includes: A desk pad with cretonne covered corners, a cretonne covered rack for stationery, or for letters already opened, a cretonne covered memorandum or address book and a cretonne backed blotter.

The ink well must, of course, be of metal or glass and can be purchased in some dainty design that will harmonize with the desk set.

To make the desk pad, cut a large oblong of cardboard and cover one side of it with cretonne, turning in the corners neatly and pasting with library paste. Set this under heavy weights and proceed with the cretonne. A piece of blotting paper is to be pasted on the reverse side of the large cardboard; then the four corners of cretonne will be pasted down on the blotting pad.

The memorandum book is an ordinary blank book provided with a cretonne slipover. The blotter is made of several sheets of blotting paper, about six inches long by three inches wide, attached to a cardboard of equal size, covered with cretonne on one side and blotting paper on the other. Bore a hole through this strip of covered cardboard and tie blotters to it. They may be pulled off as clean blotters are required. The rack for stationery is made of pieces of cardboard, covered with cretonne and then attached together. The back may be nine inches wide and seven inches high, the front nine inches long and four inches high. Side pieces will be three inches high and an inch wide; bottom piece nine inches long and an inch wide.

FROM "THE HARVEST"

Sun on the mountain,
Shade in the valley,
Ripple and lightness
Leaping along the world.
Sun, like a gold sword
Plucked from the scabbard,
Striking the wheat fields,
Splendid and lusty,
Close standing, full headed,
Toppling with plenty;
Shade, like a buckler
Kindly and ample,
Sweeping the wheatfields
Darkening and tossing;
There on the world rim
Winds break and gather
Heaping the mist
For the pyre of the sunset.

LINCOLN AND DEMOCRACY

We ask ourselves if he was the gift of democracy. And we find ourselves answering: His peculiar excellence could have come of no other order of society. We ask ourselves anxiously if democracy has the unerring instinct to find such men to embody its wishes, or did it take him only for a talented rail splitter—an average man? But we have no certain answer to this anxious questioning. What gives most hope in new confusions and problems, unknown to his day, however, is that the more clearly his disinterestedness and forbearance and magnanimity and humility are revealed, the wider and deeper is the feeling of admiration and love for his character, which perhaps assures us, after all, better than anything else, of the soundness and nobility of the ideals of democracy.—John Finley.

TROPICO

The You and I club will entertain with a Twelfth Night party at the home of Mrs. F. W. Haviland on Cerritos avenue. Mrs. Haviland will be assisted by Mrs. Edgar Frye and Mrs. Henry Dionysius.

Charles Stewart of Mira Loma avenue, chorister at the English Lutheran church in Los Angeles, is arranging to organize a choral club in Tropico. Mr. Stewart prepared the splendid musical program that was given in the First Presbyterian church Christmas eve. This clever artist was assisted in the solo and quartette selections by Mrs. Charles Stewart, Miss Dorothy Hobbs and Mr. Wayland Brown.

Of all the jolly Christmas parties during the happy yuletide none was more enjoyed than the one given by the You and I club Wednesday when the members of this organization entertained their children with a Christmas party at the home of Mrs. W. A. Reynolds on Mira Loma.

Mrs. Reynolds was assisted by Mrs. Edgar Fry and Mrs. Wayland Chapman. A very pleasing program kept the dear little people in one continual round of mirth and pleasure. A Victrola furnished delightful Mother Goose melodies and juvenile songs and then as a happy finale to the merry afternoon was the sweet little Christmas stories told by Mrs. Wayland Brown in her own inimitable and charming manner. No prettier scene that afternoon among the many occurred than that of Mrs. Brown surrounded by the dear little kiddies listening intently and hanging spellbound on every word that their charming entertainer uttered.

While a number of their Tropico friends were viewing the Tournament of Roses pageant Saturday in Pasadena, when the rain came down as only it can in Southern California, Mr. and Mrs. Wayland Brown of Gardena avenue were in San Diego attending the opening ceremonies of the Panama-California exposition.. Madame Schuman Heink and Ellen Beach Yaw added much to the splendid program which Mr. and Mrs. Brown enjoyed.

Miss Lillian El'ias returns to Stanford university the latter part of the week after spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Ellias. Miss Ellias will be graduated from Stanford at the close of this semester.

The executive committee of the Tropico Parent-Teacher association will hold a business session at the Cerritos school Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock when business of importance will be transacted.

Mr. and Mrs. Eustace Benton Moore, assisted by the latter's mother, Mrs. Nellie Penniman, entertained with a prettily appointed dinner party at the family residence on Blanche avenue Wednesday evening when they entertained complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Don L. Luther of Santa Clara. Dainty little baskets filled with lillies of the valley marked covers for this charming occasion, while the table was centered with a large basket of California fruits and flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Luther were but recently married in the northern city, where Mr. Luther is a prominent and wealthy business man. This happy young couple will spend their honeymoon in Southern California.

LIFE

Life with all its hopes and fears,
And life with all its sorrow,
Is like the passing of the years,
There's clouds today, sunshine tomorrow.

It's all the same, the years roll by,
They're filled with joy and sadness,
But we can help them if we try
To change our grief to gladness.

Yes, years roll by, how soon they're gone,
Like islands on a river;
We gaze ahead, then close upon,
And then they're passed forever.

Tho' years pass by and soon are gone,
Our deeds they live forever,
And other eyes will gaze upon
The works we weave together.

Some words are vain, they but conceal
The inner feeling of the heart;
The life alone is what reveals
And shows the world the man thou art.

How careful then we all should be
That th'ots and words and deeds are right;
There's nothing hidden, all can see,
There's nothing lost, tho' out of sight.

GEORGE W. SANFORD.
Glendale.

SONGS IN THE DESERT SOLITUDE

George E. Woodberry has painted some notable word pictures of his travels in Northern Africa and the desert. For example, he writes of the dunes on the west of Biskra: "They are real sand hills; one can climb on them, there are echoes to be waked, and the plain stretches finely to the mountains behind; but it is the forward view that holds the eye. The altitude is not great, but high enough to to give a perch something of the commanding power of a cliff prospect over the sea, and the dunes themselves reminded me vaguely of the Ipswich sand hills of my own coast and their sterile sea views. The magical thing in the desert is the unexpectedness; it is not at all like what one would have thought. It is not to me oceanic; but in those first five days, owing to the moisture of the air and the wetness, it was more so than at a later time. At some hours and under some lights the desert from the dunes had touches of an April sea, fragments of its color; it was blue—not with the solid blue of ocean, but with ethereal tints, insubstantial veils, like inland August haze, or ,to speak exactly, with the moist blueness of March."

"I suppose," continues Mr. Woodberry presently, "it was the low moisture rising from the desert that took the reflections in bands and spaces; the scene showed at times vast, distant lakes of pale azure, violet lagoons, strips of fallen sky, indigo outlooks—far away—and all in that almost aerial tone, in substantial, watery, spring-like, . . . and delicate. From the heights of El Kantara, at the mouth of the pass that looks down on Biskra, such a scene is superb in the morning air, and one might well think he was going down to the roads of an inland sea unlike all others; and from the dunes, in certain weather conditions, though on a far 'esser scale, one had this vision of the blue desert.

"But is was not the blue desert that made the dunes a leaf in my book of memory; it was a brown little Bedouin boy on a sand hillock whom I observed on my way home. I made his acquaintance. He was about ten years old; his ragged, earth-colored garment blew round his sturdy bare legs; he was capped with black hair and his small herd of goats fed beside him. He was shy, and his stolid, great eyes looked up at me—those young Arab eyes, expressionless, but which a touch of joy irradiates, seeming to liquefy their shallow light." "He was willing to be acquainted. I fed him with a chocolate and extracted from him the four French words he knew; but, notwithstanding the good offices of Cherif, whom I had with me, the best educated of the guides, and now the master of the French-Arab school there, our conversation was mostly confined to mutual kind looks. I left him after a while, and a few moments later, as I was walking toward the carriage, he began to sing. I turned. There he stood erect on the hillock against the desert slope and the low sky, with unloosened voice. The high treble rose with certain breadth and volume; but its quality was its intensity. I would not have believed the silent little fellow had so much voice in him. 'What is it?' I said. 'It is for you,' said the polite Cherif; 'it is to thank you'." "I looked up at the boy's earnest face as he sang bravely on, and listened; and when he had stopped we drove away, and the high treble began again on the hillside.

"The Arabs sing much, but this was the first time I heard song in the desert. I always think of the desert silence as embosoming such song, like the hum of insects in the grass; though it may be rare as a bird's wing, it is there in the great spaces; the desert, to my imagination, is a song-laden air, like Italy; but the Italian is garden song, the desert is wilderness song."—Christian Science Monitor.

UNBLEACHED MUSLIN SPREAD

It is desirable to own a hand-made spread, but the majority of spreads call for expensive materials. However here is a spread which can be duplicated for about $5. The spread is made of unbleached muslin. All over its surface conventional scrolls are outlined by means of huge French knots. On the spread in question white knots are used, but there is no reason why one should not use colored cotton to carry out the color scheme employed in one's bedroom. The edge of the spread is finished with cotton fringe.

In place of a quilting party, why not have a spread party? The work will then be quickly and pleasantly done.—Philadelphia North American.

BOTTLED ORANGE JUICE

Use only oranges well after beginning of season; the first oranges of the season give a bitter juice, while mature fruit does not. A good thermometer will be necessary.

Cut oranges in half and express juice on cone. To each quart of juice add about 3 ounces of sugar or about one-half a jelly glass of sugar. Put in pint bottles filled to bottom of neck. Select corks to fit bottles and heat corks 5 minutes in boiling water to sterilize them. Fit corks tightly into bottles and tie corks down firmly with string. Place a cloth or wire screen in bottom of large pot and lay bottles in horizontal position on the cloth. The cloth protects bottles against direct heat of fire. Fill pot with cold water. Heat very slowly until water of pot reaches 170 degrees Fahrenheit. Keep the water at this temperature 5 minutes. Remove bottles and dip cork end of bottles in melted paraffin to make them air tight. Let bottles cool in horizontal position. The juice will keep indefinitely if the method is followed closely. It does not retain all of the orange flavor, but it does make a very palatable summer drink when served cold. If the juice lacks tartness add lemon juice before bottling to give desired acidity.

A blend of equal parts of grape fruit and orange juice is very palatable.

PACKER CLUB TO BE ORGANIZED

The friends of S. C. Packer, candidate for Supervisor, will meet in the Chamber of Commerce room, 1011 Broadway, Glendale, and organize a Packer Club Campaign club Saturday evening. All supporters of Mr. Packer for Supervisor of Los Angeles County are cordially invited to be present.

How sweetly you sang as you circled
The elm's rugged knees in the sod,
I know! for deep in the shade of your willows,
A barefooted boy with a rod,
I lay in the drowsy June weather,
And sleepily whistled in tune
To the laughter I heard in your sha'lows,
Involved with the music of June.

ON THE VERANDA

Now Dusk, the great gray moth, has spread his wings;
Now the black trees, outlined against the sky,
Take on strange, gargoyle shapes; the mystery
Of darkness shrouds all happy daylight things.

Now the strange children of the night awake:
Through the still air the witch-winged bats go flying,
We hear the lone owl in the far woods crying;
The gray-green aspens whisper to the lake.

The evening winds' quick silver-winged feet,
Like fallen restless stars, the boughs among
Go twinklin; . . .
The trees that edge the water round about

Show clear and steadfast in the stilly pool;
And we, watching the glassy depths and cool,
See, one by one, the friendly stars come out.

A float that was entered in the Tournament of Roses parade, New Year's day, in Pasadena, was an entry of the La Canada Valley Improvement association. The float was a huge slipper made of mountain sage and roses and was placed in a bed of smilax and mountain fern. The name "La Canada," was spelled out on both sides of the float in pink and white roses. This float was filled with eight young ladies of the valley. They wore pale pink dresses and pink sweet pea hats. The young ladies were the Misses Helen Cooper, Henrietta Horne, Gladys Granger, Aldine Norton, Flossie Lea, Fanny Jewett, Katheryne Green and Clara Armstrong.

Miss Clara Armstrong was greatly surprised at her home last Thursday evening, Dec. 30, when about twenty young people of the valley gathered to celebrate her 18th birthday. Miss Armstrong was the dinner guest that evening of Miss Katheryne Green, and on returning home was greatly surprised to find her home filled with her many friends, whom Miss Katheryne Green had invited to celebrate her birthday. After an enpoyable evening, dainty refreshments were served and a large birthday cake with 18 lighted candles on it was cut by Miss Armstrong. Those who enjoyed the evening were the Misses Helen Cooper, Dorothy Lester, Fanny Jewett, Rowena Green, Lulu Green, Henrietta Horne, Katherine Hegeman, Flossie Lea, Katheryne Green and Margaret Armstrong, and Messrs. Snow in the Valley

When the residents of the valley woke up on the morning of Dec. 30, 1915, much to their surprise they found the ground white. During the night a great deal of snow had fallen. From 7 o'clock on to 12 o'clock it snowed continually. All the young people had great sport, rolling and throwing snowballs, making snow men, etc. This was the first time since 1895 that snow has fallen in La Canada.

It would have been a sad, disheartened committee of workers who had so carefully prepared La Canada's beautiful float which appeared at the Tournament of Roses, had the float been spoiled by the small fire which started in the La Canada garage from an overheated lamp, Friday night. Lucky enough, the watchman discovered the flames as they were burning the blanket which had caught fire and quickly extinguished the burning cloth.

SINCERITY IN CRITICISM

"In literature, in art, in life, I think that the only conclusions worth coming to are one's own conclusions," writes A. C. Benson in his volume of essays, "From a College Window." "If they march with the verdict of the connoisseurs, so much the better for the connoisseurs; if they do not so march, so much the better for oneself. Every one cannot admire and love everything; but let a man look at things fairly and without prejudice, and make his own selection, holding to it firmly, but not endeavoring to impose his taste upon others; defending, if needs be, his preference, but making no claim to authority.

"The time of my life that I consid-r to have been wasted, from the inte'lectual point of view, was the time when I tried, in a spirit of dumb loyalty, to admire a'l the things that were said to be admirable. Better spent was the time when I was finding out that much that had received the stamp of the world's approval was not to be approved, at least by me; best of all was the time when I was learning to appraise the value of things to myself, and learning to love them for their own sake and mine.

"Respect of a deferential and constitutional type is out of place in art and literature. It is a good enough guide to begin one's pilgrimage with, if one soon parts company from it. Rather one must learn to give honor where honor is due, to bow down in true reverence before all . . . that are noble and adorable, whether they wear crowns and bear titles of honor, or whether they are simple and unnoted persons who wear no gold on their garments."
